

Keep the Kidneys Well

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Barre People Know How to Save It.

Many Barre people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys, when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger, when all diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Barre citizen's recommendation:

Mrs. Della Stephens, 107 Seminary street, Barre, Vt., says: "I know from experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are a reliable remedy. My first trial of them dates back three or four years ago. Severe pains in my back caused me no end of sufferings, and mornings, when I awoke, I was stiff and lame across the kidneys. A tired, languid feeling clung to me, I had headaches and dizzy spells and was also bothered a great deal by a kidney weakness. Good reports about Doan's Kidney Pills led me to try them. They helped me from the first, and continued use relieved all my suffering."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

WILLIAMSTOWN.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Walker reached their western destination safely.

James A. Hopkins tells us that he expects to spend the coming winter in the South.

Our village creamery patrons were paid 32 cents per pound for butterfat last Saturday.

Rev. J. P. Demeritt took part in the pulpit exercises at the Congregational church last Sunday.

Marshall Jackson is about to have an eight-horsepower gasoline engine for work about the farm.

Town Supt. Casey has just had as a guest J. H. Aines of Whiting, Mr. Casey tells us that our schools are moving on nicely.

The Rural G. L. Reading club will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. George Martin, the last census enumerator here.

It has been four years since Dr. E. B. Watson has taken a vacation, and he plans now to take one soon with his brother, Rev. Carey Watson of Greenfield, Mass.

Our milliner, Mrs. Erskine Rowell, tells us that "to get a hired girl, you can't," and so her family are taking their meals at the Williamstown inn. She likes the place well.

We have been reminded that our hotel is no longer the Monument house, as we have lately spoken of it, inadvertently. Hereafter, we will see to it that the Williamstown inn has its "innings."

Rev. John P. Demeritt, a former minister to our Congregational church, returned here the last of last week to remain a few days. He is a veteran of the late Civil war and receives a service pension. He holds his age well.

We were glad to meet on our street Monday Neal B. Smith, who is yet at his old home here. He told us that he was not yet sure where he would winter. After so many winters in Trinidad, South America, he thinks a winter hereabouts might be good for him.

After twenty years of service with a Congregational church in Greenfield, Mass., Rev. Carey Watson concluded, not long ago, to send in his resignation as pastor of the church. The church unanimously refused to accept it, and what the end will be remains to be seen.

Our grange will have its program for the next meeting, September 21, open to the public. This is supposed to be "children's night," but it has been decided to have some of the young folks, also, of the grange take part. Everybody is cordially invited to be present at this meeting, with the assurance of a hearty welcome.

Mrs. Jason H. Jeffords, who lives with her only daughter, Mrs. Lester Heath of Barre, was in town last week, calling on friends. She was riding with Mr. Heath in his auto, and as we recall the splendid horses that he late husband used to drive, years ago, we wonder if she would not now say, "The old wine was better!"

It will be recalled that Alvin Hall, of our west hill, was so injured while threshing at George L. Williams' place some weeks ago that he had to have a portion of a leg amputated at the Heston hospital, to which he was taken at once. It is now said that the bone does not heal, and that he will have to undergo an amputation.

Was last week the first time in the history of the Williamstown Herald, now in its 10th volume, that the names of Andrew Burnham, or his son, H. P. Burnham, did not appear as local editor of the paper? We suspect it. Miss Millie J. Drury is henceforth to be the local editor of the paper. She is a capable, all-around woman, and the paper will not suffer by the change.

Angus McLeod, for a time a blacksmith here, has come out of the Victoria hospital, Montreal, with what he considers sound eyes. The operations submitted to there to restore his eyes to perfect soundness, at we have heard the case spoken of, would seem quite wonderful. Mr. McLeod's family is in Montreal, and he decides to remain and work there. We congratulate him heartily.

The Montpelier city council held a special session last night, when several requests for rebate of taxes were heard and a license was granted permitting the opening of a moving picture house and vaudeville at the armory. The Capital City press had previously opposed the move, as the insurance rates would be greater for a moving picture show in the building. W. A. Patten, the representative of Company B, which will start the new amusement place, and Charles Parker of the Capital City press conferred upon the matter, with the result that Company B will stand for and pay the increase in the insurance rates for the Capital City press and Morning Journal, as well as on the building. The company will also maintain a night watchman. With this understanding the permit was granted. The usual number of bills were ordered paid.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Movement Which Is Beginning to Fill Vacant Land.

A recent bulletin from the bureau of plant industry, department of agriculture, makes some record of the farm situation in the hill regions of southern New York state. It finds that while there has been much neglect and some abandonment of old farm lands, the soil is easily subject to restoration in fertility and is again beginning to receive attention. It now seldom happens that farm land in that state is sold for taxes, and further—

The movement toward the West and the great development of the large cities during the last 20 years have fostered and encouraged change and neglect in the East. In fact, many of these changes may be said to be the direct result of this movement which has now not only reached its limits, but has turned back eastward. Disorganization and abandonment have ceased and reorganization and reconstruction have begun.

Very interesting in this connection is the fact that many of the rundown and abandoned hill farms of Vermont are now being bought and occupied not only by residents of cities who seek quiet and an outdoor occupation in which to end their days, but by farmers, particularly from New York state, who have accumulated $2,000 or $3,000, either as owners or renters of farms and who are investing the money in the cheaper lands to be had on the slopes of the Green Mountains. The towns of Ludlow and Plymouth, where they join in too hills above the Black river valley, afford a striking illustration of this. Here is to be found a large group of one-time prosperous farms which were cut out and developed a century and more ago by pioneers from eastern Massachusetts. They were the homes of numerous families socially centered in the elevated location of Plymouth kingdom, where once stood a typical New England church with galleries and high pulpit, and a Sunday congregation which spread up from floor to ceiling. No further back than ten and twenty years ago these farms had become largely abandoned or only fitfully worked by the few of a greatly enterprising race who had been left behind in the general abandonment which succeeded upon the opening of the far West and the great fall in prices and of farm values following the end of the Civil war.

Some of these farms were wholly deserted and the buildings left to rot and fall. Others continued to be occupied, but with every indication of discouragement, sloth and penury on the part of those still holding possession. The community church, through whose broken windows and unlighted doors, the winds moaned for years, finally disappeared altogether as kindling wood for the few fireplaces still kept warm in the bleak region roundabout. Now, a drive through that locality reveals the existence of a new life and industry in occupation. Here is a farm once occupied by the A's, a large family whose descendants are scattered over the four quarters of the country. Ten years ago it was in neglect and decay. Now it is a sunny, comfortable and cheerful place, are playing by the roadside a sight new to the region since long ago. "Who are the occupants here?" the driver is asked. "York state folks," he replies. The next farm, once similarly the home of a numerous and prosperous family, but long since abandoned, of near abandonment, also shows the presence of a new life. Again the same question and the answer is again, "York state folk." And so it goes until in this brief hill drive some half-dozen York state families are located. They have come in very recently.

The
